21. The Client acknowledges and understands that Guoyuan is part of a large financial group and acts simultaneously for a large number of clients, as well as for its own account. Accordingly, conflicts of interest cannot be completely avoided. The Client also acknowledges and understands that Guoyuan and its affiliates may (subject to the applicable laws): (a) be the issuer of any investment funds and/or derivatives/ structured products; (b) combine the Client's orders with its own orders or the orders of other clients; (c) make investments or effect Transactions for the Client through agency and/or with a counterparty which is a related organization or a person otherwise associated with it; (d) have a position or a direct or indirect interest in any Transactions even if the position is opposite to that taken by the Client; (e) have bought or sold any investment funds, fixed income securities and/or derivatives/ structured products or entered into any Transactions as principal or for its other clients; or (f) have other investment banking, advisory or any other corporate relationships with companies (regardless of companies invested by investment funds, issuers of fixed income securities or companies linked with derivatives/ structured products) without consider whether the Client hold or trading the relevant investment funds, fixed income securities and/or derivatives/ structured products and its/their officers or directors may be officers or directors of such companies. Guoyuan and its affiliates shall not be liable to account or specifically disclose to the Client any profit, charge or remuneration made or received from any such transactions or other connected transactions.
22. Guoyuan does not make a secondary market in any financial products.

Specific Risks and Disclaimer of Investment Funds

1. Investment funds have their specific investment objectives. The client should understand his/her/their investment objectives. Strategy and different level of volatility and risk that may be associated with it to ensure that the investment fund is suitable in light of the client's financial position, risk tolerance level and investment objectives.
2. The Investment funds issuers and their associated parties are under no obligation to redeem the Client's holdings in any investment funds at the price of the constituent securities at the time of the Client's purchase.
3. Investment funds usually involve investing in foreign securities, assets or financial products ("Investments") through foreign stock exchanges, markets or counterparties and are subject to applicable constitution and regulations where such Investments are transacted and may involve a high investment risk. The Client should be aware of the risks associated with foreign Investments and should make the decision to invest in such investment funds only after due and careful consideration. The greater risk profile and other characteristics of such foreign securities, assets or financial products which an investment fund invests in mean that such investment fund is more suited to professional and other sophisticated investors.
4. The level of risk associated with foreign Investments can vary, depending on a number of factors, including the different rules and regulations of the stock exchanges on which the foreign Investments are traded. These foreign Investments are subject to the applicable laws and regulations of the relevant foreign jurisdiction which may be different from the Hong Kong Securities and Futures Ordinance (Cap 571 Laws of Hong Kong) and the rules made hereunder. Consequently, such foreign Investments may not enjoy the same protection as that conferred on Investments transacted in Hong Kong.

5. Some markets in which some investment funds invest in may be subject to a higher than usual risk of political or economic instability, the assets of and income from such investment funds may be affected unfavorably by fluctuations in currency rates, exchange control and fiscal regulations. As a result, the underlying securities of such investment funds may be subject to substantial price volatility. Some markets may not be subject to the same or similar accounting, auditing and financial reporting standards, practices and disclosure requirements as compared to those applicable in more advanced countries, and there may be less government supervision, legal regulations and less well defined tax laws and procedures than in countries with more advanced securities markets.
6. Certain types of investment funds may invest in higher yielding securities rated lower than investment grades. Below investment grade securities such as, for example high yield debt securities, may be considered as speculative and may include securities that are unrated or in default. As a result, investment in these investment funds is accompanied by a higher degree of credit risk than investment in those investment funds which carry higher rated and lower yielding securities.
7. The market for certain industry sectors such as technology, natural resources can be highly volatile and in many cases the prices may reflect market speculation instead of the underlying economic value of these investment funds.
8. Certain capital guaranteed/capital preserved investment funds generally carry some terms and conditions, and the redemption of securities in such investment funds prior to fulfilling all of the terms and conditions specified in the prospectus and/or other offering documents will be subject to market fluctuation or a redemption fee.
9. Certain investment funds may invest in securities, assets or financial products of emerging markets. Emerging markets are defined as markets in countries with moderate to low per capita national income. While investments in emerging markets can yield large gains, they can also be highly risky as they could be unpredictable and there may be inadequate regulations and safeguards available to investors. For instance, investments may not be readily saleable and information to determine their current value may not be available in emerging markets. Besides the risks inherent in all investments, those associated with emerging markets include, but are not limited to, country risk where government intervention in markets, perhaps in the form of exchange control laws or restrictions in the repatriation of profits, may affect the value of an investment or an investor's ability to enjoy its benefits. In addition, events (for instance, natural disasters, fluctuations in commodity prices and/ or exchange rates and political upheavals) which may have a minor or limited effect in more mature markets could affect emerging markets profoundly.

In these circumstances, investments by the Client in investment funds involving emerging market need careful and independent assessment and the Client should carefully consider the risks in relation thereto (including, without limitation, sovereign risk, issuer risk, price risk, political risk, and liquidity risk). The Client should make an independent appraisal of, and investigations into, and should, from time to time, review the financial condition and creditworthiness of the relevant emerging markets. The Client should be aware of and be able to weigh the diverse risks, some of which are identified above, before investing in investment funds involving emerging market securities, assets or financial products.

10. Hedge funds or alternative investment funds can be described as all forms of investment funds, companies and partnerships that use derivatives for directional investing and/or are allowed to go short and/or use significant leverage through borrowing. As such investment funds use alternative investment strategies and the risks inherent therewith are not typically encountered in traditional funds, prospective investors of such investment funds should give careful consideration to various risk factors while evaluating the suitability of their investment. The Client is advised to consider his own financial circumstances, risk tolerance levels, investment objectives and the suitability of the scheme as part of their investment portfolio. This document cannot disclose all the risks connected with investments in such investment funds. The Client should also carefully evaluate the risk factors mentioned in the prospectus and/or other offering documents of such investment funds and should obtain professional advice before subscribing to or investing in such Investment Funds. Investments in such investment funds involve a high degree of risk and are suitable for sophisticated investors only who fully understand and are willing to assume the risks involved and the exposure to potential losses which could involve the complete loss of their investment.

Investment strategies of such investment funds are often high-risk. Due to leverage, a small movement in the market can lead to a major gain, but any losses will also be magnified sharply. The Client acknowledges and accepts that for such investment funds the entire amount of the Client's investment can, under certain circumstances, be lost. Moreover, many investment strategies are highly complex and very difficult to understand. The Client should be aware that changes in strategy which can lead to a substantial increase in the level of risk. The liquidity and tradability of such investment funds can vary a great deal. Hedge fund issues and redemptions are often only monthly, quarterly or annually. Fixed holding periods lasting many years are not unusual. Provisions regarding trading frequency and holding periods may change frequently and rapidly. Liquidations can stretch over many years. Many investment funds in this category have an offshore domicile which earns them the name offshore funds. They are subject to less stringent legislation and supervision, which in turn offer poorer investor protection. Problems or delays may also arise in the settlement of buy and sell orders for units in such investment funds. There is no guarantee that an investor's legal rights will be enforceable.

Specific Risk and Disclaimer of Investing in Derivatives / Structured Products

1. Derivatives/structured products are complex and involve different types of risks. The risk of loss resulting from investments in such derivatives/structured products can be substantial with a total loss of capital value. The Client should: (a) study and understand the structure of derivatives/ structured products before placing any orders; and (b) have prior experience with investment in derivatives/structured products and fully understand the associated risks before making a decision to invest in such products and ensure that the products are suitable in light of his financial position, risk tolerance level and investment objectives.
2. Derivative products often involve a high degree of gearing, so that a relatively small movement in the price of the underlying securities results in a disproportionately large movement in the price. The values of derivative products are not fixed, but fluctuate with the market, which may be influenced by many factors, including changes in the economic and/or political environment. The prices of derivative products can therefore be volatile.
3. While derivative products (fluctuate with the underlying securities trading on the Hong Kong, Shanghai and/or Shenzhen stock exchanges) are unexercised and if their underlying securities are suspended from trading on the Hong Kong, Shanghai and/or Shenzhen stock exchanges, they may be suspended from trading for a similar period of time as their underlying securities.

4. Depending on the structure of a particular derivative product, an investor may be obligated to accept delivery or make delivery (as the case may be) of the underlying securities if the conversion price is triggered or pursuant to the terms and conditions of the relevant agreement, contract or confirmation of the subject Transaction. Depending on the market conditions, an investor may be obligated to accept delivery of the underlying securities at a price which is above the market price such securities or to make delivery of the underlying securities at a price which is below the market price of such securities and losses may occur resulting from such actions which can be substantial. The loss resulting from investing in such derivative products can be over and above the initial amounts invested to a substantial extent.
5. If there is an extraordinary event or an adjustment event such as stock split, issue of bonus shares or other unexpected event that changes the number, value or weighting of issued shares of the underlying stock, the counter-party/calculation agent may adjust the contract terms, at its sole discretion, to reflect the new market conditions. This may include unwinding the contract. The investor should seek independent advice from professional parties in the event of such extraordinary events or adjustments.
6. Early termination prior to maturity is possible subject to the terms and conditions governing the derivative products and prevailing market terms and conditions.
7. The value of the derivative products may be reduced due to any downgrades by rating agencies such as Moody's Investors Inc. or Standard & Poor's Rating Services.
8. By purchasing derivatives products linked to shares or securities listed on the Shanghai or Shenzhen stock exchange, the Client understands and irrevocably and unconditionally acknowledges and agrees that the provision of the derivative products is subject to and conditional upon the availability of such PRC shares and securities and access by Guoyuan to qualified foreign institutional investor ("QFII") facilities with third parties. The QFII facilities may be withdrawn at any time and Guoyuan reserves its right to terminate and unwind a trade at any time.
9. The Client should ensure that his purchase of a particular derivatives/structure product is lawful under the laws of the jurisdiction of his incorporation / domicile and the jurisdiction in which he operates (if different), and that such purchase will not contravene any law, regulation or regulatory policy applicable to him.
10. For derivatives/structure products (and non-listed financial instruments in general), in particular in "combined" or "structured" Transactions, the absence of a "market" or "common" reference price may make it impossible for Guoyuan to provide the precise value of the Transaction. Therefore the Client should be aware that price indications by Guoyuan are always based on the latest available market prices of the underlying instrument or have arrived from sources believed to be reliable. Consequently, price indications might only reflect historic prices and may not reflect the final proceedings where the Transaction is terminated or assigned immediately, if this is possible at all. Guoyuan does not make any representation as to the accuracy or completeness of price indications for any Transactions and does not accept liability for any losses arising from the use thereof.
11. Structured products are formed by combining two or more financial instruments and may include one or more derivatives products. Structured products may carry a high degree of risk and may not be suitable for many members of the public, as the risks associated with the financial instruments or derivatives products may be interconnected. As such, the extent of loss due to market movements can be substantial. Prior to engaging in structured product Transactions, the Client should understand the inherent risks involved. In particular, the various risks associated with each financial instrument or derivatives product should be evaluated separately as well as taking the structured product as a whole. Each structured product has its own risk profile and given the unlimited number of possible combinations, it is not possible to detail in this document all the risks which may arise in any particular case. The Client should note that with structured products, buyers can only assert their rights against the issuer. Hence, particular attention needs to be paid to issuer risk. The Client should therefore be aware that a total loss of his investment is possible if the issuer should default.

12. Because the prices and characteristics of over-the-counter derivatives products are individually negotiated and there is no central source for obtaining prices, there are inefficiencies in transaction pricing. Guoyuan consequently cannot and does not warrant that its prices or the prices it secures for the Client are or will at any time be the best price available to the Client. Guoyuan may make a profit from a Transaction with the Client no matter what result the Transaction has from the Client's point of view.
13. Equity-linked instruments ("ELI") carry a high degree of risk. ELIs are products combining notes/deposits with stock options which may allow a bull, bear or strangle (i.e. trading range) bet. The return component of ELI is based on the performance of a single equity security, a basket of equity securities, or an equity index. ELI may come in different forms: equity-linked notes, equity-linked deposits and equity-linked contracts. The Client acknowledges and agrees that while the maximum return on investment is usually limited to a predetermined amount of cash, an investor stands to potentially lose up to the entire investment amount if the underlying share price moves substantially against the investor's view. The Client should be able to understand the risks he is bearing before investing in ELIs.
14. The prices of the underlying securities of derivatives products fluctuate, sometimes dramatically. The price of a security may move up or down, and may become valueless. Accordingly, it is as likely that loss will be incurred rather than profit made as a result of buying or selling derivatives. In particular, for some structured products such as accumulators, depending on market conditions, an investor may be obligated to accept delivery of the underlying securities at a price which is above the market price of such securities and loss may occur resulting from such action which can be substantial. Similarly, for some structured products such as de-cumulators, an investor may be obligated to make delivery of the underlying securities at a price which is below the market price of such securities and loss may occur resulting from such action which can be substantial. The loss resulting from investing in such structured products can be over and above the initial amounts invested to a substantial extent.

General Risk Disclosures Credit Risk

1. The holder of financial products could be exposed to the credit risk of the issuer and if relevant, any guarantor of the financial products.
2. The market value of financial products may change as a result of changes in the actual or perceived credit standing of the issuer. An adverse change in the financial condition of an issuer could lower the quality of a security leading to greater price volatility on that financial product. A lowering of the credit rating of a security may also reduce the financial product's liquidity, making it more difficult to sell.
3. The Client should ensure that he has sufficient knowledge and experience in financial and business matters and the expertise in assessing credit risk and that he is capable of evaluating merits, risks and suitability of investing in financial products or has sought professional advice before making such investment. The Client acknowledges that he has performed his own credit analysis with respect to the subject financial products and has sufficient understanding of the risks involved in relation to the underlying shares or securities of the financial products and the country in which the company issuing the shares or securities is incorporated or formed and/or all other relevant matters of that country.

Currency Risk

1. Where the Client engages in a Transaction involving one currency for hedging an original investment in another currency, or where a Transaction entered into by the Client references or involves two or more different currencies, the Client should be aware that fluctuations of the currencies against each other or against the other underlying elements of the Transaction may affect the Client's net profit or loss on the Transaction.
2. Financial products are likely to invest in currencies other than Hong Kong dollars which may be subject to exchange rate fluctuations. The Client should be aware that fluctuations of the currencies may affect the value of the financial products as well as the Client's net profit or loss on the transaction.

Liquidity Risk

1. Financial products may have limited liquidity. It may be impossible to liquidate an existing position or to do so at a satisfactory price because the market finds it difficult to assess the value of financial products, to determine a fair price or assess the exposure to risk.
2. The liquidity of a financial product does not normally reflect the liquidity and the bid-offer spread of the underlying securities and even whilst there may be a secondary market in a financial product, it may not be liquid enough to facilitate a sale by the Client.
3. The Client shall not be entitled to withdraw or terminate prior to maturity all or any part of a financial product during its tenor without Guoyuan's prior written consent. Guoyuan may at its absolute discretion refuse to give such consent, or Guoyuan may impose conditions on such consent at its absolute discretion. Conditions on such consent may include (without limitation) the deduction of such breakage costs as Guoyuan shall determine conclusively acting in good faith at its absolute discretion. Such breakage costs shall include the costs, expenses, liabilities or losses incurred or suffered by Guoyuan as a consequence of breaking its hedge, or funding from other sources in respect of the financial products. Therefore, the total amount repayable on an early withdrawal or termination of a financial product at the Client's request may be less than the principal amount.

Tax Risk

Before entering into any Transactions, the Client should understand the tax implications of doing so, e.g. income or profit tax. Different Transactions may have different tax implications. The tax implications are dependent upon the nature of the Client's business activities and the Transactions in question. The Client should, therefore, consult his tax advisor to understand the relevant tax considerations.

Counterparty

The Client should ensure that he is aware of the identity of the contractual counterparty he is or may be matched with. Often, the Client will be purchasing an unsecured obligation of such counterparty (as opposed to an obligation of a central clearing corporation as would be the case with exchange traded futures and options) and the Client should evaluate the comparative credit risk. Where the Client's counterparty is Guoyuan, the Client acknowledges that Guoyuan deals with the Client at arm's length as the Client's counterparty. In such case, Guoyuan is not the Client's fiduciary, nor does it accept any fiduciary obligations to the Client. The Client should be aware that any dealing, trading, engagement or transaction with Guoyuan could result in a loss to the Client and a gain to Guoyuan. Also, Guoyuan may make a profit from a transaction with the Client whatever the result of the transaction, whether from the Client's point of view or otherwise.

Non-Transferability and Non-Marketability

A Transaction (in particular a structured or over-the-counter Transaction) generally cannot be assigned or transferred without the consent of the other party. Guoyuan is not obliged to repurchase a Transaction from the Client or terminate a Transaction at the Client's request. Because Transactions are customized and not fungible, engaging in a Transaction with another dealer to offset a Transaction the Client has entered into with Guoyuan will not automatically close out those positions and will not necessarily function as a perfect hedge. Off-exchange Transactions may also be less regulated or subject to a separate regulatory regime. Before undertaking such Transactions, the Client should familiarize himself with the applicable rules and attendant risks.

Market Forces

1. The Client's payments or receipts under a Transaction will be linked to changes in the particular financial market or markets to which the Transaction is linked, and the Client will be exposed to price volatility in that market or markets. The Client may sustain substantial losses on the contract, trade, product or financial investment if the market conditions move against his positions. It is in the Client's interest to fully understand the impact of market movements, in particular the extent of profit/loss he would be exposed to when there is an upward or downward movement in the relevant rates, and the extent of loss if he has to sell his financial products if market conditions move against him. His position may be liquidated at a loss, and he will be liable for any resulting deficit in his account maintained with Guoyuan.
2. Under certain market conditions the Client may find it difficult or impossible to liquidate a position, to assess a fair price or assess risk exposure. This can happen, for example, where the market for a Transaction is illiquid or where there is a failure in electronic or telecommunications systems, and where there is the occurrence of an event commonly known as "force majeure". Placing contingent orders, such as "stop-loss" or "stop-limit" orders, will not necessarily limit the Client's losses to the intended amounts, as it may be impossible to execute such orders under certain market conditions.

Risk-reducing Orders or Strategies

Placing contingent orders, such as "stop-loss" or "stop-limit" orders, will not necessarily limit the Client's losses to the intended amounts, as it may be difficult or impossible to execute such orders either in accordance with the Client's instructions, or at all, under certain market conditions or the terms and conditions relating to the relevant Transactions. Accordingly, the Client accepts and bears the risk, and hereby releases and discharges Guoyuan from all liability, arising out of the execution or the non-execution of a "stop-loss" or "stop-limit" order and pursuant to such acceptance authorizes Guoyuan, should any such circumstances occur, to execute any order at such price and in such manner as Guoyuan may deem appropriate. Strategies using combinations of positions, such as “spread” and “straddle” positions, may be as risky as taking simple “long” or “short” positions.

Corporate Actions

Other risks may impact on the value of financial products, for example corporate actions in relation to the company issuing the underlying securities of the relevant financial products may occur to have a dilutive effect on the value of the underlying securities. In certain circumstances the issuer has discretion as to the adjustments that it makes, if any, following corporate events.

Off-exchange transactions

In some jurisdictions, and only then in restricted circumstances, firms are permitted to effect off-exchange transactions. The firm with which you deal may be acting as your counterparty to the transaction. It may be difficult or impossible to liquidate an existing position, to assess the value, to determine a fair price or to assess the exposure to risk. For these reasons, these transactions may involve increased risks. Off-exchange transactions may be less regulated or subject to a separate regulatory regime. Before you undertake such transactions, you should familiarize yourself with applicable rules and attendant risks.

Bonds Financing Arrangement

If client requests us for Bonds Financing Arrangement, we may deposit any of the Client’s bonds with an authorized institution (as defined by the Banking Ordinance) or licensed corporation (as defined by the Securities and Futures Ordinance) as collateral for loans or advances made to us; when different kinds of default such as finance risk from these authorized institution or licensed corporations, the Client’s bonds may not exercise or/and sell at anytime; from these authorized institution or licensed corporation recourse may spend long time.
